Preface

This is a list of the active and inactive mines in the state of New Mexico. It was compiled after a study of requests for information to the Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources indicated a demand for the source material.

This compilation was made in cooperation with William H. Hays, the State Inspector of Mines in Albuquerque. From time to time supplements will be prepared as authenticated mines are called to our attention.

In compiling this directory, a search was made of the technical reports and records of the New Mexico Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources since its beginning as well as the various reports and records of the State Inspector of Mines. The records of the U. S. Bureau of Mines of the Department of the Interior were checked against New Mexico lists and the resulting lists were doublechecked with the April 25, 1963, and April, 1965, issues of the Mining World, which contain listings of active mines. The Director of the Mint Report for 1883 was also utilized as was R. W. Raymond's (1870) Statistics of Mines and Mining. Counties given are those originally listed, not current boundaries.

The * in front of the mine name indicates that this was an active mine according to Mining World. The t indicates the mine is an active mine according to the State Inspector of Mines' records and the Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources' records (1964). Where the mine has been mentioned in the State Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources' bulletins or publications or other sources, the designation in the reference column gives the bulletin or publication number and page reference. The publications are listed in the bibliography by author, title, and publisher.

The second section is a listing of companies known to have been engaged in the mining business and listed in the publication originally called the Copper Handbook, later called the Mines Handbook & Copper Handbook, still later called the Mines Handbook. The mining companies list is of historic interest and is not complete.

A listing of mining corporations that have been active in New Mexico is not available from the Corporation Commission in the state capital, since the corporation records are not kept according to business classifications.

Hundreds of names of mining claims appear in various records but these were not actually worked as mining property. Where names are known to be claim names only, they are so designated in this compilation to distinguish them from active or once active mines.

A map showing New Mexico Metal Mining Districts is included in the back pocket of the cover.

Districts, areas, and regions not shown on the map in the jacket pocket are listed in the "Mine Names" or "Mining District" columns. The map contains the standardized district names according to E. C. Anderson. (Bureau of Mines Bulletin 39, plate 1.)

Researchers wishing to find the name and ownership of individual mines in New Mexico may determine source material by referring to Circular 74 of the Bureau of Mines and Mineral Resources. (File, Lucien A., 1962 Cir. 74 Mining Records in County Offices, Bu. Mines & Min. Res.) This is an index to the location of county mining records in the various county seat offices.

The Legend of the Kneeling Nun

On the summit of Ben Moore Mountain in Grants County kneels the figure of Raquel Mendoza de Alarcorn, "The Kneeling Nun." The figure has been one of the outstanding landmarks in New Mexico for nearly 200 years.

It was at the base of the Kneeling Nun where a remarkable deposit of mineral was found in 1736 and what is now the scene of Kennecott Copper Corporation's Chino Mine at Santa Rita. The open pit mine shown in the foreground is one of the outstanding scenic attractions in New Mexico. It is more than a mile wide and 1,000 feet in depth.

The Kneeling Nun is looked upon with peculiar reverence by western miners of all races.

Among the miners who came from Mexico was a family by the name of Mendoza. A son of this family, Carlos, was to become the father of Raquel. Raquel's mother, the legend says, was a beautiful Apache maiden.

The area around the mine was not a fit place to raise a daughter so Carlos and his wife sent Raquel to a convent in Chihuahua at the age of 10.

It was back to a life of hardships that Raquel returned from Chihuahua, a beautiful girl of eighteen.

One day, into the placid life of Raquel came one Captain Fernando Don Alarcorn, a Spanish soldier sent to the area on a reconnoitering expedition. It is small wonder that poor Raquel, a nun for two years, fell in love with the handsome dashing young soldier. Fernando among other things was possessed of an intellect equal to that of his beloved.

Raquel had given her life over to religion out of sheer ennui. Within her being a severe struggle must have taken place between the calm deliberate stoicism of an Apache mother and the wild, passionate strain of a Spanish father.

When Carlos Mendoza heard of his daughter's renunciation of the church he became furious, and forbade her mother to even mention the girl's name.

Raquel and her lover moved continually from place to place. Raquel's love persisted, but Fernando abandoned his wife two weeks before the birth of a baby boy. A short time after the son's birth, Raquel heard that Fernando was ill in a mission at Hachita, but when she arrived at the mission she found that the patient was not her husband.

Heartsick and with her money entirely gone, unable to obtain work and not knowing where to turn, Raquel climbed to the summit of old "Ben Moore" one evening at dusk. Drawing her shawl about her, she knelt to pray.

Miners returning from their days labor in the mines paused a moment to look at the kneeling figure in the dusk, then went on to the warmth of their own firesides.

For a week snow fell in the Black Range and Raquel did not return. A neighboring family took the baby boy and after the snow had cleared, upon the mountain top where Raquel had been last seen, there stood an exact replica of Raquel in the attitude of prayer.

In another version of the Kneeling Nun story, the Nun is named Sister Teresa, who falls in love with a soldier named Diego. In the second version, where there had been an altar, the mountain grew in the night.

Whether the Kneeling Nun on the summit of Ben Moore is simply a formation of rock, which remained unnoticed until after Raquel's disappearance, or whether it is poor little Raquel Mendoza de Alarcorn petrified into stone, as miners thereabouts believe—who can say?
